Safe Enough to Soar: Change Champions as a Catalyst for Organization Transformation

WITH DR. JUDITH KATZ AND FREDERICK MILLER

Saturday, February 18, 2023

9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m.

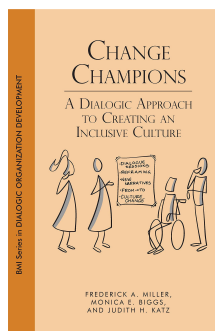

Goodwin Auditorium

Registration Required

At the February 18 Contemporary Trends in Change Management Lecture Series, Fred Miller and Dr. Judith Katz share their experience using “change champions” for cultural transformation, rapidly changing the core narratives in an organization that shift day-to-day conversations, actions and decisions in positive directions.

Discussion topics for the Lecture Series will include how to support the initial activities of change champions as they advocate for change in their day-to-day work, how to help their supervisors support their change champion and how the change champion’s role evolves as the culture shifts in the direction you are trying to go and becomes ready for bigger shifts.

Examples and cases will demonstrate the different steps in the unfolding change champion journey to produce a more inclusive organization. This lecture series is in alignment with the Miller Biggs and Katz book, Change Champions: A Dialogic Approach to Creating an Inclusive Culture which is a key resource for those wanting to improve inclusion, leverage diversity, equity and access to achieve higher organizational performance.

Change champions are people from all parts of an organization who volunteer to be advocates for a new way of thinking, talking and acting, and the change champion method by Miller, Biggs and Katz can be adapted for any change requiring an organization-wide shift in thinking and acting. Leaders and professionals who have struggled to increase, for example, safety, sustainability, psychological safety, customer focus and even cost consciousness may find the change champion approach just what they need to break through the resistance of a strong culture.
